

Sierra Club Presentation:

Population Control — Madagascar Style

Meet Cindy Salopek, a Sierra Club Club's activist with the Global Population and Environment Program (GPEP).

In 2005, Cindy was invited to participate in a field study tour to Madagascar with GPEP staff and 8 other population activists from across the United States. Cindy will talk about voluntary family planning and reproductive health care as it affects global population growth and a sustainable environmental future. They met with USAID and local NGO officials and visited villages to experience first hand the positive impact our tax dollars make in health, population, and environment programs.
